Broadly neutralizing antibodies from an individual that naturally cleared multiple hepatitis C virus infections uncover molecular determinants for E2 targeting and vaccine design.
Cumulative evidence supports a role for neutralizing antibodies contributing to spontaneous viral clearance during acute ... epitope determinants for antibody E2 targeting with important implications for the development of a B cell vaccine.