IBBR and REFI Announce New Travel Fellowship

September 12, 2019 - Applications are now open for the first round of a new travel fellowship sponsored by the Institute for Bioscience and Biotechnology Research (IBBR) and the Robert E. Fischell Institute for Biomedical Devices (REFI). Applications are due October 15, 2019.

The program will support the success of graduate students and postdoctoral researchers working with IBBR/REFI mentors whose projects align with the institutes’ shared missions toward the translation of basic scientific and engineering research into innovative solutions to biomedical challenges.

The semi-annual fellowship will provide up to $5,000 toward fees and travel expenses to present at scientific/engineering conferences and attend relevant professional development workshops.
